Deb's dream for 20 years, since reading "Under the Tuscan Sun", finally comes true. Deb and Mark are headed to Italy.

I'm going with or without you old man!

OK, have a nice trip.

Deb took to Italy like pesce to acqua as she admired the local scenery.

Is that man naked?

Her Italian studies came in handy when they were stuck on a remote mountain top in Barga and she needed to bargain with the bus driver for a free ride.

It looks like the town has closed for the season.

Sure wish we bought a roundtrip bus ticket.

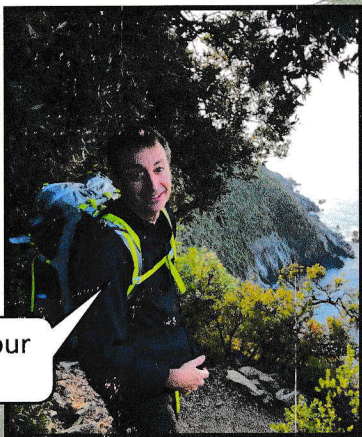

Pazza americana.

... and who needs words when you share a love of olive trees.

I knew you would let me help you pick olives if I stood here long enough. You've got that 20 lb crate right?

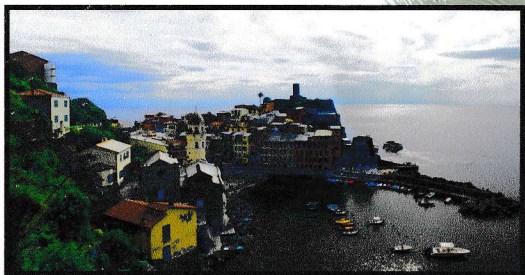

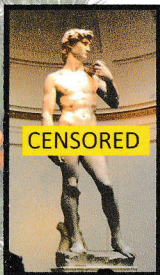

Meanwhile Mark had to be saved by a passing Argentinian couple when he inadvertently hooked himself to a fence.

Thanks for your help Deb.

He did learn one Italian word which came in quite handy.

Uno pesca Esta Thé please.

But in the end, he agreed that Italy was worth the trip.

Good thing we only do this once every 50 years

Buon Natale!
